

VENGEANCE FALLS
ON TWO WITNESSES
AGAINST CHAPMANMuncie Man and Woman Killed By Members of Slayer's Gang.

Muncie, Ind., Aug. 15.—(AP)—Vengeance trailing those who testified against Gerald Chapman, notorious bandit condemned to die for the murder of a Connecticut policeman, struck down Ben Hance and his wife near here yesterday. The Hances were shot on the Anderson-Muncie highway. In a dying statement, Hance laid the crime at the door of George (Dutch) Anderson, pal of Chapman and Charles (One Arm) Wolfe of Muncie.

It was at the Hance home that Anderson and Chapman lived after their escape from Atlanta penitentiary and after Chapman attempted the robbery of a New Britain, Conn., mercantile establishment, which resulted in the

$2,500,000 Robbery of Mail Biggest "Job" of
Two Notorious Crooks

New York, Aug. 15.—(AP)—Gerald Chapman and George Anderson, who is alleged to have wreaked vengeance in his name, have been inseparably linked in crime for years.

Their biggest job was their hold-up of a mail truck on Lower Broadway in October, 1921, in which they took about $2,400,000 in cash, securities and jewels. They were sentenced at Atlanta Penitentiary for terms of 25 years.

Chapman escaped April 5, 1923. Anderson got away later by burrowing under the 50 foot wall.

Police officials believe the two immediately got together again and that both were concerned in planning the looting of the store at New Britain, Conn., in the course of which crime Chapman shot and killed Patrolman James Skelly.

Chapman was arrested at Muncie, Ind., last January on information given by Ben Hance. Hance appeared as one of the chief witnesses for the prosecution in the trial that resulted in Chapman's conviction for the murder of Patrolman Skelly.

After his arrest, Chapman reportedly made known the depth of his feeling against Hance, muttering threats to "get the man who turned me up for blood money."

slaying of a police officer. Hance was a witness against Chapman. Wolfe, arrested in Muncie last night, is held under heavy guard, but refuses to talk. Mrs. Hance died instantly while Hance lived long enough to gasp out an accusation against Anderson and Wolfe.

Witness Describes Murder.

Mrs. Charles Cromer, standing on her front porch, witnessed the tragedy. She related:

"Three machines were coming down the road, one a small coupe carrying an Ohio license, a large red automobile and the Hance car." The red machine passed the others almost in front of my house. The coupe pulled up in front of the Hance car and stopped. Mrs. Hance and her husband alighted, words were exchanged and the bandits shot. Mrs. Hance fell dead with a bullet through her head. Hance and a man supposed to be Anderson wrestled the road. Several shots were fired on each side. Other shots were fired after him as he leaped over a fence into a corn field."

The gunmen then turned their weapons on the red machine which had stopped 200 yards up the road. Another machine which passed also was fired at before the two slayers jumped into the coupe and drove away.

A Middletown officer, called to the scene by Cromer, who had found Hance, the stricken man gasped:

"He stayed at my home. I told on him. They shot me—Charles Wolfe and Dutch Anderson."

Suspect Arrested

Several hours after the shooting, Wolfe was arrested at the home of his mother-in-law. A coupe resembling the machine seen at the tragedy was parked in front of the Strahan house. Wolfe maintained a stoical silence.

According to local officers, the Hances lived in constant dread of death since Chapman's conviction. Friends of the condemned man have sworn vengeance on Hance for giving information against him. It was due to Hance's knowledge of the movements of the Chapman gang that he was arrested.

At the time Hance went to Hartford, Conn., to testify, his wife refused to go, fearing he might be killed. Several times during her husband's absence, she appealed to the authorities for protection declaring her home was being watched.

It has been known that Anderson has been in the neighborhood of Muncie for several weeks. Anderson it is believed, was engaged in bootlegging in Indiana.

CHAPMAN NOT INFORMED

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 15.—(AP)—So far as prison officials know, Gerald Chapman has not been informed of the reprisal that resulted in the death of Ben Hance and his wife. Warden Scott said that the bandit has had no visitors during the morning. His attorneys may call upon him at any time, but none of them this morning.

MISSING BOYS GOT RIDE FROM CITY TO RIVERPhiladelphia Lads in Dixon, Dr. Evans,
Dentist, Thinks.

An appeal from a heart broken mother, Mrs. R. Strain, 28819 North Twelfth street, Philadelphia, Pa., which was addressed to The Telegraph, pleading for assistance in an effort to locate her son, Robert Strain, was answered today. While it was impossible to give the exact location of the missing son, The Telegraph was able to assure Mrs. Strain that her son was in the city a few days ago in good health, with a companion, and trying to make his way to California.

Dr. L. R. Evans was the informant and through the information furnished by him, it is hoped to find the missing boy. In furnishing the first definite information concerning the boy, Dr. Evans this morning said:

"A week ago Tuesday, August 4, Dr. John La Due, a plate specialist with offices in the Marshall Field annex in Chicago was in Dixon with his son and visited with me. He was driving his car and was on his way to Clinton, Iowa. I met him over on the north side and he had two other young fellows with him. One of these was the Strain boy whose mother is anxious to locate or hear from him. I took them into the Fulf's confectionery store and bought an ice cream soda for them. I talked with young Strain and his companion and they told me that they were trying to make their way to California. Dr. La Due informed me that he had met the boys and was driving out of Chicago and was taking them as far as Clinton in his car. I am positive that this is the young man referred to in last evening's issue of The Telegraph. He was in apparent good health and seemed to be thrilled with his trip to us far and expectant of seeing the Pacific coast in California, as was his companion. I recall having warned Dr. La Due about picking up strangers and he answered me that these two boys were clean young fellows and deserving of the lift he was giving them."

MAN WHO SAVED
LINCOLN DIED IN
DEEPEST DISGRACESecured Money For U. S. in Europe and Then Spent All His Own.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—(AP)—Abraham Lincoln had a press agent.

He was Robert J. Walker, whose ingenuity brought millions in financial aid to the federal government in loans from Europe in 1863, when the Civil War was at its crisis.

One he got into a balloon and rode across England, the first man to do so, scattering propaganda. Another time he rode through London behind six milk white horses in an equipage more glorious than that of the Austrian ambassador, to show the British that the "rail splitter" had money.

Walker was so described by Prof. W. E. Dodd, University of Chicago historian, in the last of a series of lectures on "little men of great influence in American history."

The President's press agent was sent to London to put a stop to Confederate loans and to borrow as much as he could to sustain the credit of the federal government, said Professor Dodd.

"He took his own check book with him. He spent a great if not the greater part of his fortune to support the wealth and dignity of the United States."

Propaganda Booklet.

"His ride in the balloon was a sensation. The propaganda he scattered was in the form of a pamphlet like Wilson's 14 points dropped in the World War behind the German lines."

"It was a stroke of genius. Within a month the credit of the Confederacy fell from par to nil. The southerners were frantic. Of course it was false-hood pure and simple. The London Times, hitherto friendly to the south, opened its columns to Walker."

"But that was not all. Walker began to borrow for Lincoln. Lincoln was in sore need. Walker went to Holland where he borrowed more for Lincoln. But it was at Frankfurt, Germany that Walker performed miracles. There he induced Jewish bankers to lend the United States $250,000. It was as great a stroke as winning the Battle of Gettysburg. Lincoln was saved in Europe."

After he returned to America, Professor Dodd showed, Walker never offered a job and he never even approached adulation in Washington. He was not reimbursed and he and his wife, the granddaughter of Benjamin Franklin, were reduced to poverty. He began to lobby in congress and received money from the congress to bribe members of congress to vote for the purchase of Alaska. He attempted a bribe or two, failed and then testified to his own humiliation and shame. He died and was buried unmarked and obscure.

DEATH OF WIFE
OF J. P. MORGAN
CAME SUDDENLYHad Suffered Since
June 14; Sleeping
Sickness Fatal.

BULLETIN

New York, Aug. 15.—(AP)—The funeral of Mrs. J. P. Morgan, wife of the international banker who died yesterday after a two months illness, from sleeping sickness, will be held Monday and will be private. Only members of the family will be present.

The funeral services will be held at the St. John's Church of Lattingtown, Locust Valley, New York at 2:30 p. m., and will be conducted by the Rev. C. W. Hinton, rector.

Mrs. Morgan was for years a communicant at St. John's. It was the last church she attended before she was stricken June 14.

Internment will be in the Locust Valley Cemetery in the Morgan family plot. The simple ritual of the Protestant Episcopal church will be read. The plot comprises about 200 square yards, enclosed by a natural growth of trees, principally white oaks and maple.

Dr. Hinton left a week ago for a month's vacation at Saranac Lake, N. Y., but has been notified of Mrs. Morgan's death, has left his hotel for Glen Cove. He is expected tomorrow.

New York, Aug. 15.—(AP)—Mrs. J. P. Morgan, wife of the international banker, lay dead in her palatial home at Glen Cove today, a victim of the mysterious sleeping sickness.

For two months a corps of physicians, backed by unlimited funds, had fought to save her life, but she never emerged entirely from a state of coma.

The end came shortly after noon yesterday and the immediate cause was a heart collapse induced by an attack of indigestion. The primary cause, however, was lethargic encephalitis, a form of sleeping sickness.

Only a physician and two nurses were at the death bed, Mr. Morgan arrived after Mrs. Morgan's death.

Two sons, Junius Spencer Morgan, associated with his father, and Henry Sturgis Morgan were on the Morgan yacht Corsair in Long Island sound. They were summoned by red messengers to New York.

The daughter of Henry Sturgis Grew, Boston banker, mill owner and financier, Mrs. Morgan was married to Mr. Morgan in 1890, one year after he was graduated from Harvard.

She shunned society and was fond of an old-fashioned home life, devoted to her children and the cultivation of flowers.

Her philanthropies were large, but given almost anonymously.

She was stricken in St. John's Episcopal Church, Locust Valley, Long Island, June 14, while attending services. Blood transfusions and injections of dextrose rallied her from her coma only for short intervals. She was fed artificially on vegetable soups and broths. In recent weeks there was marked improvement until Tuesday she developed indigestion. This was followed by a weakening of the heart.

With the Aurora harness races for the week of the Lee county fair—Aug. 25, 26, 27 and 28—called off, officers of the Amboy organization expect many of the fast horses which were expected to start at Aurora to be taken to Amboy for the week's races, insuring the best entry list in the history of the local association. A fine race program has been arranged by the Lee County fair promoters consisting of two races on Wednesday, three on Thursday and two on Friday, and there is no doubt each event will be well filled.

Fine amusements have been booked for the fair, which will open Tuesday with free admission to all of the school children, for whom special attractions have been arranged. Three fine ball games, which Ward Miller of Dixon, former major leaguer, will umpire have been booked. All games will be played at 1:30 in the morning. Amboy meeting, Walter Wednes-

Plymouth, Vt., Aug. 15.—(AP)—Back home with his father, President Coolidge took advantage today of the opportunities for relaxation.

The president was determined to keep affairs of state in a conference before going into a conference Monday with Secretary Mellon and Senator Smoot relative to negotiations now under way for refunding of the Belgian debt.

Joy at finding his eighty-year old father well enough to be about contributed considerably to the executive's visit.

Smiles as radiant as shone on his faces earlier yesterday when they met their son, John, for the first time in uniform, lighted the faces of Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge when they found Colonel Coolidge awaiting them.

MAY NOT HAVE A HIGH SCHOOL IN
POLO THIS YEARPeople Vote Against a New Building; Have No Class Rooms.

Boys and girls of the Polo community entitled to a high school education will be forced to go outside of their district and pay tuition the coming school year, starting with the opening of the fall term in September. This will affect 200 boys and girls, who were enrolled to attend the high school.

The fact that Polo will not have a high school this year for the first time in 50 years is due to the fact that there is no place available to conduct the classes. The high school has been held in the elementary school building for a number of years, but due to the crowding of the graded school pupils the board of education notified the high school directors many months ago that they would not rent space to them again.

The high school directors have done everything in their power to solve the problem. Last spring an election was held at which time the proposition of a new building was voted by the people. The proposal of a new building was submitted to the citizens for the second time on Tuesday of this week, but they again defeated the plan, 733 to 553.

The high school directors admit that they have been placed with their "backs against the wall," and are at a loss to know what to do. In a signed statement published in the County Press of Polo, the directors say:

"We regret to inform the people of the Polo Community High school district that we cannot open a high school on September 1st. Whether we will be able to open one at any time during the year 1925-26 we are unable to say at this time. We have our teachers engaged, and our supplies ordered but we have no place to hold the school."

"We cannot rent the building we have been renting. The Polo district wishes its own building for its own school purposes. Tuesday the Community district voted not to build a building of its own."

"The only possibility of having a high school for even a part of the year 1925-26 depends upon our ability to rent and remodel available buildings. Up to now we have been considering the question of renting and remodeling available buildings for school purposes, deeming it an inexcusable waste of money. We dislike to waste our own and other taxpayers money in such a way. However, since we cannot rent the school building and the district refuses to let us build a building, and while our oath of office compels us to maintain a Community High School, we are forced against our will, to take this step."

"If any one has any other solution than the ones we have proposed we shall be pleased to have it in writing."

Expense to Taxpayers.

In the news columns the Tri-County Press makes the following comment:

The community board has levied $40,000 for this year instead of the $25,000 in other years. This extra $15,000 was to be used as the first payment on a new building. Now the board is hoping that it will pay the rental and the cost of remodeling the necessary buildings in which to hold school the coming year. So our taxes will be just the same as if a new building had been voted. And that's that."

"A novel legal question was proposed after the result of the election became known. Here it is: Every child in this community district is entitled to a high school education at the expense of this community. If the district fails to provide that education, can a parent maintain a suit against the district to compel it to furnish that education or to pay the tuition and other expenses of the child at some other high school? The propounder argued that a citizen who was willing to pay his high school tax should be able to maintain such a suit. It is an interesting question with more than 200 pupils in or ready to start to high school."

"It looks as though last Tuesday's election was one in which all sides lost—but our boys and girls most of all. Evidently what we need is the leadership of Moses and the wisdom of Solomon in working out a solution of this most vexing high school question."

Dr. Jewett removed the crown, put in a temporary filling and asked the President to return later in the day. Mr. Coolidge, much relieved, promised to do so.

VIOLATIONS OF
GAME LAWS ARE BEING PROBEDSheriff Receives Complaints of Illegal Shooting.

Complaint was registered at the sheriff's office today of the unlawful slaughtering of prairie chickens, quail and doves, long before the opening of the season as provided by the Illinois game laws. Names of some of the violators were also furnished by farmers living south of the city, who complained that flocks of prairie chickens and quail, which had been cared for by them had been completely wiped out.

The complaint is not an unusual one for this time of the year, as several days before the opening of every season, farmers and sportsmen who favor the protection of game birds report violations almost every fall. The matter has been referred to the Isaac Walton League as well as members of the Lee County Farmer's Protective Association, who will be alert for violators. One farmer living in Harmon township is said to have committed the extinction within the week of a large flock of prairie chickens, which he had given a great deal of attention for many months.

One morning shortly after daybreak, he complained he heard a fusillade of shots in a stubble field near the house and when he arrived on the scene, two men were climbing into an automobile carrying the dead chickens and their shot guns.

Young quail which are only a little better than half grown at this season of the year are being slaughtered in large numbers, it is said. Doves are another protected bird which at this time of the year can easily be shot from telephone poles and wires as well as wire fences early in the morning.

A petition to annul the marriage was filed in district court yesterday by Mrs. Marquis.

The girl is said to have agreed to give up her husband and return to school this fall and to put aside her matrimonial affairs until she is 18 years old.

TODAY'S MARKET REPORTS

Weekly Grain Review

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Chicago, Aug. 15.—Rough tumbled down of wheat prices this week has come about largely through simultaneous government crop reports in Canada and the United States. Each of the two reports took the wheat trade by surprise and both indicated that unofficial estimates of 1925 production had been millions of bushels below the probable harvest yield. Compared with a week ago, wheat this morning was 5 1/4¢ to a bushel lower, corn unchanged to 1/4¢ off, oats 1 1/4¢ to 1 3/4¢ down and provisions varying from 50¢ decline to 25¢ advance.

Wild fluctuations in wheat values took place as soon as trading began after the two government reports were out. Prices smashed downward nearly to a bushel in the first rush to sell and despite rebounds a further loss of about two cents ensued.

Abnormally light movement of domestic wheat to primary centers together with an active demand from millers did a good deal to rally the wheat market later. Talk was current that farmers had adopted a holding policy for the time being and it was pointed out that on one day receipts of wheat at Chicago were only 64 cars.

Corn prices were upheld both by the government crop report and by the fact that for the first time in many weeks, the visible supply is smaller than was the case last year. Grain were responsive both to claims.

Declines in provisions followed passage of the new German tariff bill.

Butter Market

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Chicago, Aug. 15.—(AP)—The weaker feeling which prevailed in the butter markets during the week ending August 8 was carried over into the week under review and trade was unsatisfactory.

Although there were occasional spots where a fair amount of buying was in evidence, taking the week as a whole trade was dull and at the close the tendency on all markets was toward lower prices.

The greatest lack of confidence appeared to localize in Chicago where

Last week there was evidence of a changing sentiment from the "bull to the bear" side of the market and during the week under review this was even more apparent. There appears to be a large number of operators who have been on the buying side of the market that are now switching their positions to the selling side.

This was especially in evidence on the December future deal at Chicago, during the week ending August 15. These options opened Monday at 45¢ and broke sharply on Wednesday and Thursday to 44¢, but showed a slight recovery to 44 1/4¢ on Friday.

Weather and pasture conditions appear quite favorable over the majority of the producing sections for a continuation of a good make of butter.

Debt Commissions Mark Time Until Next Tuesday
Washington, Aug. 15.—(AP)—The American and Belgian debt commissions were marking time today in their negotiations over the funding of the little kingdom's $480,000,000 war debt to the United States.

Work of the two commissions was suspended yesterday until Tuesday to permit both parties to take up the progress to date with higher officials of their respective governments.

Secretary Mellon and Senator Smoot of the American commission were enroute to Plymouth, Vermont to lay the facts before President Coolidge.

Although the work to date is still described officially as proceeding in a satisfactory manner, there is a definite indication that one side or the other must make a decided recession if an agreement is to be reached. Interest rates are the stumbling block.

Is First Hobo to Steal Ride on An Airplane

Los Angeles, Calif., Aug. 15.—(AP)—The blind baggage of a passenger, train may be good enough for most hoboes but when Jack Richmond found himself up against it for transportation at Las Vegas, Nevada, yesterday, he grabbed the wing of an airplane and beat the best railroad time into Los Angeles.

The plane Jack "flipped" as it was taking off was piloted by Major C. C. Mosley, head of the California National Guard Air Force, and the weight of him hanging on the outer edge of the wing nearly sent the ship into a disastrous side slip.

Neither Major Mosley nor Sergeant Wood, accompanying him, saw their unwitting passenger until they were well off the ground and were having difficulty coaxing the craft into an even keel. When they did glimpse him they motioned him to crawl in toward the fuselage.

Jack told newspapermen he was 17 years of age and had left his home in Milwaukee July 7 to "beat his way to the coast."

"IF HE SHOULD MEET A MOTHER THERE"

(By Request.)
By Edgar A. Guest.

If he should meet a Mother there,
Along some winding Flanders road,
No extra touch of grief or care
He'll add unto heavy load.
But he will kindly take her arm
And tender as her son would be He'll lead her from the path of harm
Because of me.

Be she the Mother of his foe
And stand before her bare of head;
He will not speak to her in hate;
My boy will never stoop so low
As motherhood to desecrate.
But she shall know what once I knew:
Eyes that are glorious to see,
The light of manhood shining through
Because of me.

He will salute her as they meet,
And stand before her bare of head;
If she be hungry, she may eat
His last remaining bit of bread.
She'll find those splendid arms, and strong,
Quick to assist her, tenderly,
And they will guard her from all harm
Because of me.

I miss his thoughtful loving care,
I miss his smile in these dreary days,
But should he meet a mother there
Helpless and lost in war's grim maze,
She need not fear to take his arm
As though he'd reared him at her knee,
My son will shield her from all harm
Because of me.

Menus for the Family

BY SISTER MARY.

Breakfast—

Baked pears, codfish puffs, graham muffins, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—

Salmon timbales, creamed peas, sour cream drop cookies, apple sauce, whole wheat bread, milk, tea.

Dinner—

Stewed chickens with tiny onions, new potatoes in parsley butter, stuffed tomato salad, maple mousse, sponge cake, whole wheat rolls, milk, coffee.

There are lots of delicious things to make when the cream "turns" or the milk sours. The cream makes the usual amount of shortening unnecessary so butter is saved.

The sour cream drop cookies are good for a picnic or afternoon tea. All nuts or all raisins or dates can be used or these "goodies" can be omitted entirely.

Sour Cream Drop Cookies.
One-third cup butter, 1/4 cups sugar, 2 eggs, 1/2 teaspoon soda, 1/2 cup "heavy" sour cream, 3 cups flour, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon, 1/2 cup raisins, 1/2 cup nut meats.

Cream butter and beat in sugar. Add eggs well beaten. Mix and sift flour, salt and baking powder. Dissolve soda in sour cream and add alternately with dry ingredients to first mixture. Add flavoring, raisins and nuts finely chopped. Drop by spoonfuls onto a buttered and floured baking sheet and bake 12 minutes in a moderate oven.

OF COURSE YOU CAN'T PICNIC WITHOUT SANDWICHES.

No picnic is ever complete without sandwiches, so these suggestions seem appropos at this time of year.

When a particular sandwich bread is used a filling is not necessary. Plain yeast breads are usually made into sandwiches with a piquant or sweet filling of some sort.

Always cream the butter before attempting to make sandwiches and be sure the bread knife is sharp. With these two precautions sandwich making is not a chore. Otherwise neat, thin sandwiches are an impossibility.

White Nut Bread.
One-half cup sugar, 1 egg, 1 cup milk, 3 cups flour, 5 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 cup coarsely chopped nut meats.

Beat egg well. Beat in sugar. Add milk. Mix and sift flour, salt and baking powder. Add nuts and mix thoroughly. Add to liquid mixture and stir well. Turn into a buttered and floured deep pan and bake forty minutes in a moderately hot oven.

Pretty Wedding Was Solemnized Wednes.

Walnut, Ill., Aug. 14.—A pretty home wedding was solemnized Wednesday morning at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Stone when her youngest daughter, Florence, became the bride of George Gougan of this place. Miss Vera Stone played the wedding march promptly at 9 o'clock and the bridegroom with his best man, Clarence Fisher and the minister, Rev. A. H. Nauman of St. Clair, Minn., entered the living room and met the bride and her matron-of-honor, Mrs. Verna Stone Fisher at the foot of the stairway. Amid beautiful floral decorations and in the presence of the immediate families and a few close friends the impressive ring ceremony was pronounced binding together, two of Walnut's most popular young people.

After congratulations a most elaborate wedding breakfast was served by Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Milliken, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Shearburn, Miss Caryl Meisenheimer and Elmer Wedding.

The bridal gown was a lovely white georgette and lace and the matron of honor was a gown of henna georgette. The young people left on an extended trip to Denver and other western points. After their return they will be at home in the new bungalow near completion in the northeast part of town.

The out-of-town relatives present at the wedding were Rev. Conrad Nauman of Kenyon, Minn., Rev. A. H. Nauman of St. Clair, Minn., Mr. and Mrs. Leon Gougan and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Sartini of Ottawa and Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Moland of Leland.

ESTABLISHED VALUES—SAVE FOR HUMANS—

By Cynthia Grey.

At Deauville the other day, Mrs. Jean Nash, reputed to be the best dressed woman in the world, lost a valuable string of pearls and she was decidedly upset.

"Alas," she is reported to have said, "one can always get a husband, but pearls have a great value."

She has had more than one husband, many suitors and a king's ransom in jewels, so she probably knows which she values most, men or pearls.

Pearls have an established value which does not fluctuate. You can take a string of pearls to a dealer and find out exactly what value they have in the jewel market, and what you can get for them if you want to part with them.

You can do the same with diamonds, antiques, rugs, paintings and other valuables. Their value to most of us is determined purely by their selling value.

How many persons do you suppose actually get fifty thousand dollars' worth of satisfaction from pearls? How many actually feel the beauty in the Renaissance paintings or the carved jades they collect? How many would purchase them if their value had not already been determined by their antiquity?

Their great value is their power to impress others, their expression of affluence.

When you can spend a fortune collecting pearls or paintings, you are telling the world how prosperous you are much more effectively than if you hired a press agent.

If you only buy the things you actually want or need, you probably wouldn't impress anyone, and furthermore you wouldn't get much fun out of your money.

We live in a world of established values, except for humans. When it comes to people, there is no way of getting an expert's opinion, because people are valuable only in relation to use and not to the world in general. Their value is variable.

It would be most convenient if a girl could take her intended husband to an appraiser of husbands and say, "Behold this fine shiek I have in tow! Mark well his patent-leather hair and polished finger nails. What is his actual value?"

Or if a man could take the girl whose smile has charmed him to an expert in feminine character and say, "Gaze upon this excellent creature whom I adore. Is she genuine? Or is she only a copy?"

Of course, you can look up a man's financial rating and you can know the worth of his holdings at the present time. But he may lose all in the Far Rockaway land boom, or buy sugar or wool just before the market drops and have nothing two hours afterward. And his financial rating means nothing anyhow. What you want is his value as a human being.

The man you couldn't consider as a marriage proposition because he had beefy hands makes an excellent husband for some other woman, while the god-like one you accepted because he looked like Lord Byron and wrote free verse, turns out to have no sense of responsibility and you have to become the bread winner or starve. You simply weren't a good judge of human values.

The woman you trusted turns out to be a mischief maker while the one you snubbed because she wore such funny hats comes along and does something splendid for you. Again you failed in judging human material.

But these mistakes and bad bargains and unexpected pieces of good luck are all the threads from which we weave the fabric of our experience. When we have become so expert at the job of estimating humans that we are no longer imposed upon

WHY DO THEY DO IT?

What do Americans say when they go to Europe, and why do they say it? Congressman Burton of Ohio, who recently took part in the Geneva arms conference as a representative of the United States, is willing to overlook some faults of the American with brag and bluster, as this type is compared with the one who goes abroad and belittles his own country. He calls them 2 percent Americans. The amount of mischief done by talkative persons, who speak for none but themselves, but who are taken seriously, is incalculable. Concerning Mr. Burton's conclusions, the Cleveland Plain Dealer, published in the city in which he resides, says:

"Perhaps the most distressing of these self-appointed spokesmen is the American who goes abroad and declares the United States has no real intention of collecting the war debts. He speaks for no one but himself, but because he is more or less prominent in some walk of life his unauthorized statements are taken seriously, much to the detriment of the work of those who really are trying to impress on the European mind that a debt is a debt, and that the United States, though a considerate creditor, really expects to be paid."

"Other Americans go to Europe and denounce all things which are typically American in either social or official life. They seek to create the impression that they are ashamed of their country; and this naturally leads to the assumption that most really significant Americans are ashamed of America."

"Mr. Burton is not in any way upholding noisy and offensive American brag when he denounces the equally and more dangerous American subservience which he has found so troublesome. All he suggests is that Americans obsessed by the sense of America's inferiority refrain from voicing their views under the camouflage of authoritative utterances. The rebuke is merited."

KEEP HIGHWAYS OPEN.

The division of highways says that from all parts of the state are coming requests for permission to move houses or other buildings on hard roads. Officers of this department have made a public statement on that matter. They say that upon the state is imposed not only the duty of building the highway, but of maintaining it and keeping it open for the public. In ruling against use of highways for moving of buildings, the officials say:

"Our attitude in this matter is sometimes misunderstood and condemned as arbitrary, but such is not the case. When heavy buildings are moved on the pavement there is considerable danger of damaging or weakening the slab, due to an over-concentration of load at a few points. An equally great objection is that such operations interfere with the normal highway traffic to such an extent as to be highly inconvenient, if not actually dangerous, to drivers."

"We appreciate the fact that it is less expensive to move buildings on the paved state highway than on unpaved roads, but we must at all times hold the interests of the many above those of the few. It is for these reasons that we refuse to grant permits to move buildings on our paved roads. Furthermore, we are determined to take full legal action against anyone who attempts to put the state roads to such use without permission."

DOG DAYS THE YEAR AROUND.

Somebody always is upsetting our popular notions. Dog days, the days when dogs have rabies, the days when dogs go mad, always have been in July and August. Now comes a state commissioner of health and declares that there are more cases of rabies in January and February than in any other two months of the year, and undertakes to dispose of the theory that muzzling dogs in midsummer ends all danger of infection.

He says that in Detroit the dog license fee is made high enough to include administration of canine virus, and that not a case of rabies has been reported there in three years.

Now if they will also invent a virus that will prevent dogs from being nuisances in a neighborhood, some real progress will be made. When they offer something that will prevent dogs from digging holes in terraces, ruining shrubbery, and otherwise making mischief, always on the lot of the neighbor instead of the owner, a ready sale can be found.

The dog is man's most faithful friend. Every man who feels the need of one should keep one, but not require neighbors to keep it.

BABE RUTH.

Babe Ruth is now said to be on the warpath for those newspaper writers and others who insist on spreading stories to the effect that he can and will tread no paths but the primrose one.

The big athlete is hardly to be blamed. True, his own missteps gave the avil chorus the idea in the first place. But now that he is walking the straight and narrow, he says, they won't believe it.

It isn't really much of anybody's business but his. Besides, the case of swelled head that he acquired a year or so ago seems pretty well to have subsided.

Leave the poor chap alone. When all's said and done, he does provide a lot of us with a whole lot of entertainment.

Preparation for the heaviest fall business in the history of the company is being made by the Union Pacific railroad.

BY CHESTER H. OWELL

How much should one know, about what is going on about him, to be qualified to vote?

Well, here is how much one voter knew:

Joe Rodriguez of Martinez, Calif., left his cabin one evening and went down to the neighboring city of Oakland, only a few miles away to "bum around a while and have a good time."

He registered at a hotel in the middle of town, where he was well known, visited his brother-in-law and other friends, went to the movies, and "bummed around" generally.

The very night he left a man was murdered in the factory adjacent to Joe's cabin, and the body was identified as Joe. Every edition of every paper sold in Oakland was full of the murder, with headlines all across the page. Everybody in Oakland who ever read anything, or who knew anybody who did, was talking about it.

Joe was far more famous than any candidate for office he will ever have to vote for. Also, his own reported murder would naturally be more interesting to him than any political issue will ever be. But Joe and his friends were probably the only people in Oakland who did not know of his sudden fame. They did not notice the newspaper headlines themselves, though they were being shouted on the streets all around them, nor talk to anyone who did.

After he had "bummed" enough, Joe walked back to his cabin, astonished at the attention he attracted. And this man, who did not know enough to know that he was himself the chief public character of the moment, is a voter, to choose other public characters, to rule over him—and us!

Public Regulation

Can Regulate

How far we are from the "trust-busting" era! President Coolidge is urging the railroads to consolidate, and only hoping that they will do it voluntarily, so that he will not have to resort to law to compel them. And yet the time when such mergers were wicked and criminal is so near that the man who made a reputation as Roosevelt's most efficient buster is still active enough to be secretary of state.

It is the final triumph and acceptance of the principle of public regulation. Monopoly could always be more efficient and economical than competitive individualism—if it would. But, left to itself, it never would. So, while we finally regulated the railroads by law, we were just distrustful enough of our own regulations to insist on the old automatic regulation of competition, too. Now we know better. We know that public regulation can regulate, and we trust it to do so. We therefore insist on the economies of a monopoly, well knowing that we can assure ourselves of the benefits of the savings.

Join the lines, strong and weak, profitable and losing, useful and misplaced, in a few systems, competing with other systems only in service and inside the system not at all, and we have a situation in which transportation costs the railroad only what it must. Then we will see to it that it costs us no more.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS IN DIXIE LAND

Around a bend came a little boat.

"Let's go to Dixie Land and see if we can find the last button," said Juggie Jump to the Twins. "We have eleven out of the dozen. One more and we can go home. Then you can sew Puff's buttons on his coat, Nancy, and he'll be as good as new."

"Until he sneezes them off again," laughed Nick.

"I'm going to see if I can't find some sneezeless pepper for him to use when he cooks," said Juggie Jump. "As a general factotum, that is one of my duties—to look for anything that is useful in keeping house."

"How do we get to Dixie Land?" asked Nancy.

"Well, we can go by the Magic Shoe Road, or the Magic Button Path," said Juggie Jump in a jolly voice. "Either one will get us there in a jiffy. 'It's only a few hundred miles down south.'"

The Twins took hold of Juggie Jump's coat tails. "We'll leave it to you," they laughed. "We're getting lazy."

"Oh!" cried Juggie Jump. "You don't deserve it, but I know a time way to get there. I'll press my magic button marked 'ever and ever so little' and we'll ride there on humming birds. How will that suit you?"

"Fine!" cried the Twins happily. "So they held on still more tightly to his coat tails, and when he shrunk they shrank, too, until they were tinier than the Fee Wees in Fee Wee Land."

Then Juggie Jump whistled, and three lovely humming birds flew down. One was green with a ruby throat, one was blue with yellow wings, and one was orange with black and blue and green and red and a good bit of white.

"To Dixie Land!" cried Juggie Jump, hopping on the first bird. The Twins followed, Nancy choosing the blue one, and Nick the yellow.

Pretty soon they arrived and Juggie Jump said, "We will hunt up Will O' the Wisp. He knows everything that happens down here."

"Oh, he sleeps all day," said the green humming bird politely. "He doesn't come out with his boat and lantern until after sun down."

"Then we shall wait," said Juggie Jump. "Thank you for bringing us. You may go now."

The three humming birds flew away, leaving the travelers sitting beside the pond where Will O' the Wisp lived.

"Whip-poor-Will! Whip-poor-Will!" called a voice dimly just then.

"Why, what for?" asked Nancy indignantly. "What has he done?"

"Nothing!" croaked a groggy voice from the water.

"Katydidd, though! Katy did though!" chirped another voice.

Nick laughed. "It's the meadow people," he said. "They aren't talking about Will O' the Wisp at all!"

"Hush!" said Juggie Jump. "Here he comes now. I see a light."

Around a bend came a little boat. In it was a queer little man holding up a lantern.

Good Thoughts for Good People

Great Thoughts belong only and truly to his whose mind can hold them. No matter who first put them in words, if they come to a soul and fill it, they belong to it, whether they floated on the voice of others or on the wings of silence and the night.
—Longfellow.

To acknowledge one God, and one only, means that all that is opposed to God must be effectually excluded from our thoughts, for it is from our own thinking that we must begin to remove all error. God, who proved to be the protection of the children of Israel, their source of supply, their healer and guide, brings upon us, His children also, no suffering or sorrow; and if these seem to obtain in our experience, it is because we have temporarily enthroned in belief some false power or presence.
—The Christian Science Monitor.

There is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so.
—Shakespeare.

Keep up the fires of thought, and all will go well.—You fall in your thoughts or you prevail in your thoughts alone.
—Thoreau.

A man's reputation is what his fellow men think of him. A man's character is what God knows of him.
—Van Dyke.

How blest are they whose hearts are pure.
From guile their throats are free
To them shall God reveal Himself,
They shall His glory see.
—William Goode.

No thought which ever stirred
A human breast should be untold.
—Robert Browning.

For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth,

Only OAKLAND has the Harmonic Balancer

(A) Power-flow of the new Oakland Six engine with Harmonic Balancer—vibrationless, uniformly smooth at all speeds.

(B) Power-flow of other stars without Harmonic Balancer—not uniformly smooth, but having vibration periods as illustrated.

Readings taken with the Crankshaft Indicator, a device for measuring torsional vibration Flash from a walk to the very limit of this new Oakland's amazing speed-range. At all speeds—unmatched freedom from vibration.

That's the new Harmonic Balancer—simple in design but sensational in results. Only Oakland has it—only Oakland can give you the freedom from vibration it alone imparts.

If this were all—if the Harmonic Balancer were Oakland's sole new feature—this new Oakland Six would still be outstanding. But in addition there are new Bodies by Fisher—Air Cleaner—Oil Filter—Four-Wheel brake refinements—and a host of other features.

And with all of these advancements, the new Oaklands are priced from $70 to $350 lower! See the new car—drive it—then you'll wonder why anyone would be satisfied to pay more and get less.

THREATS OF REDS
AND WHITE HOSE
FLASHES IN PANBoth Pennant Races Between Two Teams from Now On.

New York, Aug. 15—(AP)—With slightly less than one third of the race still to be run, pennants in both major leagues seem to have been definitely placed out of the reach of at least twelve clubs.

Late in July Chicago in the American and Cincinnati in the National, gathered strength and struck out at the leaders in their respective circuits. But it was apparently a mere flash in the pan. Standings today again indicated confinement of the pennant fights to two teams in each circuit for the remainder of the season with the White Sox eleven and one half games behind second place Washington in the American, and Cincinnati six full games behind the plodding steps of the New York Giants in the Nationals.

Washington's thrusts at Philadelphia, in spite of the closeness of the American leaders to their persistent rivals, have failed to penetrate Connie Mack's first place fortifications. For weeks the hot breath of the world's champion has been at the backs of the Quaker City team, but victory has matched victory and defeat has balanced defeat so closely that the Athletics have clung to their slender margin of between one to two games.

Athletics Grab Two.
They struck off another brace of triumphs yesterday, Sam Gray holding the Boston Red Sox offensive in check while his Philadelphia mates clustered an even dozen bingles to win easily 6-3 as Ruether triumphed for Washington in a pitching duel against Sam Jones of the Yankees, 2-0. Bluege's double in the eighth terminated seven scoreless innings and rescued the champions.

In the only other game of the American League, the St. Louis Browns defeated Cleveland 10-7.

The New York Giants picked up a game on the Pirates in the National by gathering both ends of a two game effort with Brooklyn, Scott scattering eleven hits to clinch the opener 2-2 and a pinch single by Frank Snyder saving the second in the 8th frame 5-3 after the Robins had dead-locked the score in their half.

The Pirates won one game, but enough hitting was crammed into the contest, to decide a complete series. Of 28 safeties made off four pitchers, Pittsburgh collected 16 for a decisive win 14-6.

The Cubs balanced hits with the Cardinals, nine each, but Alexander tightened in the pinches and Chicago won, 7-4.

Boston Braves and Phillies collaborated in a slugfest with the Quakers stretching their quota of 15 hits for the most runs, 11-8.

Fitzsimmons Has Signed

New York, Aug. 15—(AP)—Floyd Fitzsimmons, promoter of Michigan City, Ind., was on his way to Chicago today with two signed agreements paving the way to a heavyweight championship fight next summer between Jack Dempsey and Harry Wills.

One agreement he brought here with him early in the week with the

Both agreements are of a preliminary and tentative character. Mullins, verifying Fitzsimmons' statement that he had finally come to an understanding with the promoter, announced that he had signed "because Fitzsimmons has Dempsey's signature, so it is evident if I want Wills to meet Dempsey, I must negotiate with Fitzsimmons."

Jack Kearns, who holds a contract as manager of Dempsey, said he would "have much to say before this fight takes place" while Promoter Tex Rickard, dismissed "all these offers of $1,000,000" coming from Chicago as "bunk."

Helen Wills Only One of Americans to Win

New York, Aug. 15—(AP)—America's women net stars require three victories out of four matches today to retain the Wightman cup from England in the International series at Forest Hills.

England scored two triumphs in the three matches during the opening days play yesterday. Helen Wills, American singles champion saved the home team from a shut out, by taking the measure of Joan Fry, 6-0, 7-5.

Mrs. Molla Mallory went down to defeat before Miss Kathleen McKane while the English doubles teams of Mrs. Lambert Chambers and Miss E. H. Harvey, triumphed over Mrs. May Bundy and Mrs. Mallory.

COLUMBUS OWNER
WINS BOTH PARTS
- RAINY DAY STAKEWire Worthy, Owned By Markle, Took Consolation Race.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 15—(AP)—The victories of Wire Worthy, in the Rainy Day sweepstakes consolation for two year old trotters, and Gordon Dillon, in the Sportsman, for three year old trotters, and the smashing of the world's trotting and pacing records for a mile and an eighth, featured Friday's grand circuit racing at North Randall.

Wire Worthy, is owned by J. Markle, Columbus, O., who also is owner of Station Ballo, winner of the main division of the stake Thursday. He was driven to a straight heat victory by Ben White, Lexington, Ky., who also was behind station Bello and who trained four of the money winners in the stake.

Although under a veterinarian's care, Gordon Dillon had no trouble in taking the sportsman. He was sent away in the lead and never was in danger in the first two heats, but tired in the stretch in the third and finished fourth.

Lowers Record Full Second

In winning the first heat of the 2:19 trot in 2:20, Truax, driven by Richard McMahon, Lexington, clipped a full second off the trotting mark for a mile and an eighth. The former record was set by Tennis here July 8. This time also was lowered Friday when Peter S. won the second heat in 2:20 2-5, and paid $153.50 on a $2 mutual ticket. The race was won by Dr. Strongworthy which took the third heat and was the largest gross money winner.

The passing record at 1 1/4 miles was twice lowered by Miss Czar Moko, an easy winner of the 2:08 pace. Driven by Neil Edman, Memphis, she stepped the first heat in 2:15 3-5 and the second in 2:18 2-5. Lily the Great, which set the former mark of 2:18 4-5 on this track July 4, was also a starter but finished far back in the first two heats and was withdrawn.

The 2:04 pace, unfinished from Thursday, went to the favorite, Tarzan Grattan, winner of the Kalamazoo $25,000 derby. Tarzan Grattan took the two heats raced Thursday and had no trouble annexing the third yesterday, with Jackie O'Connor second in each heat.

Bonnie Watts took the 2:15 claiming pace after finishing third to Alluwo Blodeau, which won the three quarters mile heat, his first start on the grand circuit. Bonnie Watts took the last two at longer distances. The summaries:

PEOPLE'S COLUMN

THE BEAST

In the Book of Revelations we have the assurance of the end of all evil;
the certainty of the final destruction of a terrible creature called the beast.
What form of iniquity that monster personifies we do not know, but the name fitly applies to the demon of the liquor traffic as he goes through human society today seeking whom he may devour. Reading the daily paper with its heart-sickening recitals of wrong and outrage, and the feeble efforts of the government of our "free and happy land" to kill the monster, we breathe a restoring breath only when we recall and fully believe that
"all iniquity shall stop her mouth" some day before the face of an almighty and righteous God. His mouth will stop only when it is dead.
The men and the women who by their concessions and patronage of the shameful sale of the diabolical stuff, either for personal gratification or gain of money, will surely find this law stands forever: "Be not deceived;
God is not mocked; whatsoever a man
soweth that shall he also reap."
There are gleams of hope for the coming generation however. It is true that liquor can be had almost anywhere if one looks for it, but the abomination of the saloon does not grin its ghastly smile at every corner and children do not carry the poison in open affront on the streets. The prohibition law is not fully enforced, but it does check the traffic in a great measure, and for this right thinking people give thanks. But legislation never destroys evil. It is an outward restraint only. The Lord who knows human nature in its secret depths says it is not the things outside or man that defile him, but that which comes out of his own heart. There is no cure for earth's sin or sorrow but the old gospel of a regenerated nature, a cleansed heart and a cleansed spiritual sight. To the tempted, to the moderate drinker, to the wholly enslaved, the message comes: "Whom the Son makes free shall be free indeed." It is the only true proclamation of freedom. Men and women of fixed moral purposes are needed to defend others who are exposed to destructive opinions, customs and social tendencies. We are our brother-er's keeper. There are many evils that defile the soul and undermine social morals, but the head and front of all is the use of intoxicants and drugs. Let us set heart and voice and example with inflexible purpose against it.

The FANGLE

LETTER FROM LESLIE PRES. COTT TO RUTH BURKE—CONTINUED

Slowly we glided out on the deck. I felt Syd's arm tighten almost imperceptibly.

"Are you happy, Leslie?" he asked.

"Very. I never participated in such a gorgeous party before. It doesn't seem to be of earth, earthly. Mr. Sartoris was just talking to me of that fairy land he calls his mind, and it seems as though he were able to make a fairy land on board his ship."

"Perhaps I'm very wicked, Syd, to enjoy it so much, when there are so many people who would almost give their immortal souls to have the money that just these white flowers have cost. But I can't help but enjoy it. I can't feel that I am robbing them. This is my night of joy, and I am very happy."

"You certainly ought to take great pleasure in it, for in all my life, Leslie, I have never known a woman who has been so wonderfully flattered before. No wonder Melville Sartoris is irresistible, if he pays his devoirs to each woman who strikes his fancy as he has done to you."

"What do you mean, Syd? I have never heard you speak so caustically."

"I guess I'm jealous, that's all. Melville has done this thing so beautifully, he has done something that, however much I should ever care for a woman, I should never be able to do. I would not know how. And you can say what you please, a woman likes to have money spent upon her if it is done with good taste and imagination."

"It is a good thing, my dear Leslie, for Jack's peace of mind, that Sartoris sails tomorrow morning for the Orient for an indefinite stay."

"Now, Syd, you're joking. You know Jack's peace of mind would never be shattered by me. Why do you make me feel as though I should be unhappy on this, my perfect night? Besides, I thought that Mr. Sartoris was coming directly back after he gets the little jade man."

"Perhaps he will, Leslie. Perhaps he will. But don't you think, my dear, that he will ever give to you the little jade man if he should get it?"

"Are you speaking for yourself, Syd?" I asked suddenly. "Would you keep the little coral man that is the complement to the one you gave me, if you could find it?"

Syd turned a grayish white. "I thought you had forgotten the one I gave you Leslie. I recognized the jade one as a counterpart of the coral one I gave you when you opened the package last night at the Travelers' Club."

"So did I, Syd, but I thought it better not to mention it. You did not seem to be aware that it was the little coral bibelot you gave to me."

"Strange, isn't it, that you two men should have each found one-half of a pair of those rare statuettes?"

"Not so strange, my dear. One always finds if one seeks earnestly."

"And what are you seeking so earnestly, Syd?"

MAY SEYMOUR FOOT LOOSE

by BEATRICE BURTON
SEQUEL TO "THE FLAPPER WIFE"

ONEA

THE STORY SO FAR:

MAY SEYMOUR, whose husband, DR. JOHN SEYMOUR, killed himself because of her love affair with JIM CAREWE, returns to her home town after a year's absence.

She comes late one night to the home of her lawyer, DICK GREGORY, and GLORIA, his wife. She tells them how the ugly story of her past has followed her everywhere. And so she has made up her mind to go to Europe where no one will know her.

She turns over her house to ULYSSES X. FORGAN, a wealthy widower, to sell for her. And she begs Dick to sell her stocks and bonds for whatever they will bring. All she wants, she says, is enough money to dress the part of a rich widow for a few months, so that she can "land" a rich husband.

A week later, with $8000 in her handbag, she goes to Atlantic City for a rest before sailing. There she meets a divorcee, CARLOTTA FROLKING, and her two friends, HERBERT WATERBURY, and DAN SPRAGUE.

One night the four of them go to ADORÉE'S little supper club. May drops her bag and her great roll of bills fall out. Waterbury offers to take care of it for her, but May refuses to let him.

She buys herself some fascinating new clothes, suitable for her role of Wistful Widow, and a $600 black pearl ring to match a string of imitation ones that she wears.

Waterbury gives luncheons and dinners in May's honor, and shows her snapshots of his great house in Brookline, Massachusetts.

One morning, when the four some go swimming, May is somewhat disillusioned by the sight of Herby in a bathing suit. But, she figures, when a man has money, it's just as well to overlook any faults he may have!

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

SHE took another long look at Herby, and a shudder of distaste ran through her. He looked almost elderly in that bathing suit.

"He's forty-five and I'm twenty-seven," she figured. "Almost twenty years difference!"

But what was a mere difference in years? Money was the thing that mattered. . . . And Herby with his town house and his country estate and his globe trotting certainly had it! Anybody could have a beautiful time with plenty of money. . . . even May married to December!

"And I certainly am going to marry him. . . . Herby, not December!" May thought with determination. "So watch my dust!"

Then she sighed. Why was it that all the handsome young fellows, like the life-saver who patrolled the beach, were poor? And all the middle-aged men with paunches were the ones who had the money? It seemed so unfair to a girl. . . .

She jumped up from the sand and shook herself. "Come on, Dan," she called to Sprague who was swimming in toward shore, "I'll race you out to the ropes!"

Sprague beat her by the length of

Attributes Long Life to Whiskey and Tobacco

Quincy, Ill., Aug. 14 (AP)—Attributing his long and active life to the almost constant use of whiskey and tobacco, Charles Bean celebrated his 97th birthday at his bachelor apartments here today. He is the oldest native of Adams county and is unusually active both physically and mentally.

Nathan Douchy, Connecticut sage, who also champions the use of liquor and tobacco, is a rank amateur, according to Mr. Bean, six years his elder.

"Good liquor is hard to get," Mr. Bean declared, adding that he hasn't had a drink of real good stuff since prohibition. Previous to that time, he had used alcoholic beverages steadily since his 15th birthday.

He has chewed strong plug tobacco since boyhood. He keeps up with the news, believes in the evolution theory and takes long daily walks. He is one of the earliest pioneers of western Illinois and has a number of "rare relics in the home where he lives with another aged man."

"My dear girl," he said. "Why don't you invest this money or at least some of it?"

His body. Exhausted, they clung to the ropes and laughed for the sheer joy of living. . . . of lying there in the sparkling green water with the warm sunny air around them. Through her drenched lashes, May smiled up at Sprague like a sea-siren.

"Oh, lady, lady," he said softly. "When you look at me like that, my heart flops over like a flounder!"

"Herby! You mustn't talk to me like that!" she scolded, striking off toward the distant beach. But the smile that she tossed over her shoulder through the spray, plainly said "Come hither!"

Dan swam after her. Together they crossed the glistening beach toward Herby and Carlotta who sat side by side, apparently wrapped in deep gloom.

"Wonder what they're singing the blues about," Sprague said, nodding his head toward them.

"We mustn't run away from them again," May told him quietly. "And you mustn't flirt with me. After all, you're Carlotta's property."

"Yeah, she thinks I'm her property," Dan answered sulkily.

"Or perhaps she doesn't mind it," May went on. "Tell me, do you make love to every girl you meet?"

He slanted a grin at her. "Every pretty one," he confessed gayly.

May's teeth came together with a little snap. "That's just how I had you sized up," she said coldly. "No wonder Mrs. Frolking spends half her time crying!"

"Does she cry?" he asked indifferently.

May looked at him sharply. What a cruel mouth he had! . . . But there was a devil-may-care air about him that was very taking. She had to admit to herself that, as time went on, she was finding Dan Sprague more and more attractive.

Deliberately she turned her thoughts away from him to Waterbury. She mustn't lose sight of the all-important fact that her job at present, was to "land" Herby, and all he stood for. . . . money, security, and the comfortable position of a Little Lotta asked unhappily. "Then she's got to make him want her!" May answered, lightly. "Any man will fall for the proper amount of vamping, done neatly and artistically, my dear. Getting married is a cold business proposition, and don't you forget it. From a woman's standpoint, at least."

"I never thought of it in just that way," the other woman said. There was a shadow of doubt in her shallow blue eyes. "I. . . well, I'm terribly in love with Dan Sprague, if you want to know. Please let him alone, won't you?"

May laughed. There was a little devil of mischief in her face. "Maybe," she said. "Goodby, I've got to skip alone. I've a luncheon date."

At the door of the dressing room she turned. In her voice was the pity that a young woman feels for one whose charms are fading. . . . whose youth is going.

"No, it's not with your Dan," she said gently. "Don't worry. I'll let him alone. I promise you. He interests me not at all. And besides, I have other fish to fry."

She and Waterbury found a deserted spot a mile down the beach where the sand was smooth and white. May spread their lunch there on a white cloth that she had bought in a linen shop along the Boardwalk.

"By the way, did you put that money of yours in the hotel safe, or bank it, as I told you to?" Herby asked, when they had eaten and had drunk to each other in ginger-ale.

May shook her head. "No," she confessed. "Suppose the bank should fail, or an earthquake should shake the hotel down. . . . No, I think I'll keep this money, right here. Silly of me, isn't it?"

She patted her beaded bag. Waterbury picked it up, opened it and drew out May's roll of bills.

"My dear girl," he said, "Why don't you invest this money, or at least some of it? Buy some stock in Dan's oil well, for instance?"

May widened her eyes. "Is that what Dan does for a living. . . . sell oil stock?" she asked. "I wondered why he has so much time on his hands."

Her face became thoughtful. "I have a large sum of money back home in. . . .," she began.

"And I would like to invest that safely. Perhaps when the time comes, you'll give me some advice about it."

"How much money have you?" Waterbury asked lazily. But May was the gleam that came into his eyes.

Heavens to Betsy! What if he should be trying to marry her for her money! Or, rather, for the money she let him think she had. . . . What a low-down trick that would be! . . .

"Oh, I have only a little. A few thousands," she answered. "I'll tell you just how much, when the time comes! Let's not talk about money!"

"Let's talk about you. . . . and me," she went on after a poignant silence. She had the look of a woman deeply and mysteriously stirred as she turned to Waterbury. Her eyes were bright and her lips half opened.

"But, for May, the thrill was gone from his kiss. The "first exquisite rapture" of that moment two nights ago under the stars, was not to be recaptured, it seemed.

"What's the matter with me, I wonder," May thought at the very moment of his kiss. "I think I'm in love with a man. . . . and, then, all of a sudden, I find I'm not. Perhaps some day, there will be someone. . . ."

There was a letter from Ulysses X. Forgan waiting for her when they returned to the hotel.

He had found a buyer for May's house. "I can get $12,000 cash for it, or $16,000 on terms," he wrote, and went on to explain the details of the terms.

"Well, that's easy. I'll take the cash, and let the credit go," she decided, folding his letter.

She stood for a moment looking down at the envelope, with Ulysses' firm, fine handwriting dashed across it.

Somehow, his writing brought back to her, the memory of the man, himself. His strong, alert, straight-featured face! His well-knit body! There was no excess of fat there. . . . no hint of laziness and flabbiness.
